Dear Hiring Manager,

I am applying for the Client Documentation Generalist role (100%) in Zurich. I am an AML, KYC and financial crime compliance professional with nearly nine years in banking, based in Zurich and holding a Swiss B permit, so no sponsorship is required.

Reviewing client documentation for completeness and accuracy is the substance of what I have done throughout my career. At IndusInd Bank I ran KYC verification, remediation and periodic refresh: reviewing files for individuals and legal entities, recording what was deficient, and going back to the client and to the teams holding the relationship for what was missing. Structured file reviews and process improvements on that work reduced documentation errors by 25%. Requesting missing documents from the front and answering their questions on documentation standards is familiar ground – I guided branch teams on precisely that.

For legal entities I have verified Ultimate Beneficial Ownership, including LLPs and private trusts, and checked corporate registration records as part of the identification process. I have handled FATCA and CRS requirements at onboarding and throughout the relationship, and managed account opening, maintenance and closure across the client lifecycle, keeping records audit-ready and supporting internal compliance reviews. Much of that work was for High Net Worth and affluent clients, where discretion is not optional.

Two things I should be straightforward about. I have not yet worked under CDB 20, and my formal education is in Linguistics and English Literature rather than a commercial apprenticeship. Against that: your posting asks for three years in bank customer documentation and I have nearly nine, across three banks. And when I needed the Swiss regulatory framework, I went and learned it – SAQ-recognised AMLA/AMLO-FINMA 2025 training and the Basel Institute on Governance course on combating terrorism financing, both on my own initiative. I would come to the Code of Conduct the same way. My German is at B1.

I would welcome the chance to discuss how that experience fits your team.

Yours sincerely,

Moumita Dey
